Part 1: General Information

1.1 What is the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Protocol?

Canada's Premiers recognized the need to address apprentice mobility barriers and on July 16, 2015 signed the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Protocol. The Protocol is a framework that enables apprentices to pursue jobs anywhere in Canada, facilitating their ability to work temporarily or move permanently without interruption to their apprenticeship training.

1.2 What is the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Agreement?

All Provincial-Territorial Ministers responsible for apprenticeship signed a Provincial- Territorial Mobility Agreement, based on Premiers' direction as included in the Protocol. The Agreement details jurisdictional commitments to facilitate apprentices being able to work temporarily or move permanently between provinces and territories and receive recognition (to the extent practicable) for hours worked and other training completed. It also enables individuals who have successfully completed pre-apprenticeship training in one jurisdiction to receive recognition for that training if they register in another jurisdiction.

1.3 What is meant by pre-apprenticeship training?

Pre-apprenticeship training is an introduction into an apprenticeship offered through off-the- job or technical training (including vocational training), work experience or both. Pre- apprenticeship training may be delivered through a high school, community partner or a post-secondary institution; training provided through a post-secondary institution is referred to as pre-employment training in many jurisdictions.

1.4 What is meant by temporary apprentice mobility?

An apprentice may need or choose to work in another province or territory temporarily and wish to continue their apprenticeship training. Temporary apprentice mobility enables an apprentice to work temporarily outside their home jurisdiction, and in some cases, take technical training and write an exam, and receive recognition towards completion of their apprenticeship by their home jurisdiction.

1.5 What is meant by permanent apprentice mobility?

An apprentice may decide to permanently move to another province or territory and transfer their apprenticeship to their new location. Permanent apprentice mobility supports an apprentice's move by enabling, in most cases, the apprentice to resume their apprenticeship training without interruption in a new province or territory. In some cases, the apprentice may need to undergo a placement assessment to identify training gaps that may need to be addressed which can result from differences in provincial or territorial laws or regulations, such as building codes.

1.6 What trades are covered by the provincial-territorial apprentice mobility protocol and agreement?

All designated trades where apprenticeship training is available.

Part 2: Pre-Apprentices

2.1 I am a pre-apprentice, how does this apply to me?

A relevant, successfully completed program taken by a pre-apprentice in one province or territory may be recognized towards apprenticeship training in a designated trade in another province or territory.

2.2 I am a pre-apprentice, who do I contact for information on registering as an apprentice in another province or territory?

See the jurisdictional contact information section included at this end of this document or refer to the Provincial-Territorial Apprentice Mobility Transfer Guide and contact the province or territory you are interested in transferring to.

2.3 Is there a time limit that applies to ensure I receive recognition for my pre-apprenticeship training prior to registering as an apprentice?

Some jurisdictions specify a period where a pre-apprentice's training remains valid. After the expiration period, the pre-apprenticeship may not receive automatic recognition for the pre-apprenticeship training. This ensures the pre-apprenticeship training remains current and valid. Check the Pre-Apprenticeship section of the Transfer Guide for more information.

Part 3: Apprentices

3.1 Can I be a registered apprentice in one province or territory and be a resident of another province or territory?

Yes. Even when working temporarily outside your home jurisdiction, you may be required to register in a training jurisdiction. Check the Provincial-Territorial Apprentice Mobility Transfer Guide for specific requirements.

3.2 What province or territory will issue by trade certification?

Your Trade Certificate, with a Red Seal endorsement if applicable, will be issued through your home province or territory.

Part 4: Temporary Mobility

4.1 I have a job offer in another province or territory and plan to work there temporarily. Do I have to tell the province or territory that I am registered in?

It depends on the requirements of your home province or territory. Some jurisdictions require an apprentice to submit an application or other documentation to work temporarily in another province or territory, while others do not. Check the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Transfer Guide for detailed requirements.

4.2 I am already working temporarily in another jurisdiction, should I contact my home province or territory to let them know?

It depends on the requirements of your home province or territory. Some jurisdictions require an apprentice to submit an application or other documentation to work temporarily in another province or territory, while others do not. Check the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Transfer Guide for detailed requirements.

4.3 Do I have to tell my home province or territory every time I change employers?

It depends on the requirements of your home province or territory. Some jurisdictions require an apprentice to notify them whenever they change employers, while others do not. Check the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Transfer Guide for detailed requirements.

4.4 Do I have to contact the jurisdiction that I plan to work temporarily in?

If you are working in a compulsory or regulated trade, a number of jurisdictions require you to register. In addition, some jurisdictions require you to register when working temporarily, regardless of the trade you are working in. Contact your home jurisdiction prior to leaving if you need more information. Check the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Transfer Guide for detailed requirements.

4.5 Who do I contact for information on registering as an apprentice in another province or territory?

See the jurisdictional contact information section included at the end of this document or refer to the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Transfer Guide and contact the province or territory you are interested in talking to.

4.6 If I am training in a trade that is not offered in the province or territory that I wish to work in temporarily, can I continue my training?

If you are temporarily working in a jurisdiction and follow the requirements of your home jurisdiction, it is likely that you will be able to continue your training through work experience, in a jurisdiction that does not offer your trade. It is recommended you contact your home jurisdiction prior to leaving to ensure you meet all requirements and receive recognition for your work.

4.7 If I am working temporarily in a province or territory, are financial supports available to me?

If you are registered in one province or territory and working temporarily in another, you are still able to access any financial supports offered by your home province or territory and grants or loans offered by the federal government. Contact your home jurisdiction for more information.

4.8 Can I apply for any financial assistance that may be offered by a province or territory that I am working temporarily in?

No. Provincial and territorial financial assistance can only be accessed through your home province or territory, where you are registered as an apprentice. Contact your home jurisdiction for more information.

4.9 Can I take off-the-job or technical training (classroom/vocational training) in a province or territory that I am working temporarily in?

In some cases, there may be an opportunity to pursue off-the-job or technical training in another province or territory. Contact your home jurisdiction to discuss possible training opportunities and/or requirements.

4.10 Can I take off-the-job or technical training if I am a registered apprentice but I am currently unemployed?

Yes, provided you meet the requirements of your home province or territory to attend the off-the-job or technical training and the jurisdiction in which you are temporarily residing can also accommodate your request. Contact your home jurisdiction to discuss possible training opportunities and/or requirements.

4.11 Do I have to return to the province or territory that I am registered in to write exams, including my final certification exam?

Not always. Any province or territory can administer an exam on behalf of another province or territory if both jurisdictions agree. For detailed requirements, refer to the Provincial-Territorial Apprentice Mobility Transfer Guide or contact your home jurisdiction.

Part 5: Permanent Mobility

5.1 What happens if I decide to move permanently from one province or territory to another and intend to continue my apprenticeship?

Before moving, you should ensure all your training records are up-to-date. Once you have found an employer in the jurisdiction where you wish to move, you will have to register and pay a registration fee, if required. You may also undergo a placement assessment to identify training gaps that may need to be addressed. Training gaps can result from, for example, differences in provincial or territorial laws or regulations, such as building codes. For detailed requirements in each province or territory, refer to the Provincial-Territorial Apprentice Mobility Transfer Guide.

5.2 If I am training in a trade that is not offered in the province or territory where I wish to move permanently, can I continue my training?

In the case of a permanent move to a jurisdiction where the trade in which you are training is not offered, you will be unable to transfer your training, but you may be eligible to receive some credit towards a similar trade. It is recommended you contact the jurisdiction that you are thinking of moving to for more information.

Part 6: Employers

6.1 What is the process to hire an apprentice already registered in another province?

Generally, much of the process for an apprentice to work temporarily away from their home province or territory or to transfer permanently falls to the apprentice. For more information about apprentice registration requirements see the Provincial-Territorial Apprentice Mobility Transfer Guide.

6.2 Will I be contacted by the jurisdiction that the apprentice is registered in if they are working temporarily for me?

Some jurisdictions may contact you to verify hours, employment and supervision.

6.3 If the wage rates are different from one province or territory to another, which wage rate applies?

If applicable, the wage rates as regulated by the province or territory in which the apprentice is working temporarily will apply. In some trades, the provincial-territorial minimum wage rate may apply. Apprentices who are working in a unionized workplace are bound to the wage schedule as set out in their collective agreement.

6.4 How will employing a registered apprentice in another province or territory affect the journeyperson/apprentice ratio?

The journeyperson/apprentice ratio, where applicable, is determined by the regulations of the province or territory where the temporary work is being performed. When ratios apply in a jurisdiction, employers must ensure they do not exceed the ratio, including any temporary apprentices that may have been hired.

6.5 In a compulsory or regulated trade, is it necessary to contact the jurisdiction where I will temporarily employ the apprentice?

In some jurisdiction, compulsory or regulated trades require registration even if the apprentice is only working temporarily. Information is offered to apprentices in this regard through the Provincial-Territorial Apprenticeship Mobility Transfer Guide. The employer, along with the apprentice, must ensure necessary registration requirements are completed prior to the apprentice beginning to work.

6.6 Do I have to accept hours worked with another employer in another province or territory?

It is expected that an apprentice's file will be updated and verified by the apprentice's home jurisdiction before they begin working. The employer may recognize the hours acquired by the apprentice in another province or territory.

6.7 What wage rate do I have to pay an apprentice if they are registered in another province or territory?

The employer would pay wages in accordance to the level of training achieved by the apprentice and as required by the jurisdiction.
